I, _____, am submitting my tickets, as described in the attached application, to TicketsFromTheWeb.com for sale in their consignment program. I have read and understand the attached terms and conditions.

I understand that TicketsFromTheWeb.com will return 80% of the wholesale price for which my tickets sell. I understand that my check will be issued within 30 days of the sale.

I understand that there is no guarantee that my tickets will sell.

I understand that I may take my tickets “off sale” at any time before they have sold, but that I will be required to pay return shipping. During this “hold time”, I will be obligated to sell my tickets should the contingent sale go through.

I certify that my tickets are genuine, that they are legally mine, that I have the right to sell them, and there are no court orders or other binding orders or agreements preventing me from selling them. The following terms and conditions govern all consignment sales handled by TicketsFromTheWeb.com.

- All sales are on an at will basis. Either party may remove the tickets from sale at any time prior to a sale. - TicketsFromTheWeb.com will pay 80% of the wholesale price for which tickets sell. Payment will be issued within 30 days of the sale.
- The owner of the tickets will determine the wholesale price. It will be solely the responsibility of the ticket owner to adjust the price if the market changes. TicketsFromTheWeb.com Consignment Program: Pricing suggestions.

Your pricing will play a significant role in your selling success. While the markup on our website will be very modest, it is important to remember that your tickets will be broadcast for sale on hundreds of websites owned by brokers nationwide. When they appear on other websites, a more significant mark-up will be included. While every broker sets their own mark-up, 25%-35% is typical. You should set your price to allow for that mark-up so the retail price remains competitive industry-wide.

Follow these steps:

- ✓ Locate your event on our website.
- ✓ Compare your tickets against those in our system. Determine what you believe the retail value to be. Remember that the price you set will significantly affect how quickly, if at all, your tickets sell.
- ✓ Some factors to consider are:
 - section and row
 - aisle seats: aisle seats are generally worth slightly more.
 - Quantity: single seats are generally worth significantly less and can be tough to sell. Odd numbers can also be tougher to sell, but are sometimes worth slightly more because they are tougher to come by.
 - Restrictions will be noted online. Obstructed view, limited view, side and rear view (for concerts), alcohol restricted sections, and other restrictions all affect the value of your tickets.
 - We maintain all of our prices in $5 increments.
- ✓ Multiply the retail price you determine by .8 (this will be your recommended wholesale price).
- ✓ If your tickets sell for this price, you will receive 80% of this price.
 - Example:*
 - You find comparable tickets on our site priced at $125.
 - $$125 \times .8 = \100 (the approximate wholesale value)
 - If your tickets sell, you receive $80.00!

Remember, you can adjust your price at any time. Changes in a market can cause significant changes to the value of your tickets. For instance, if you hold baseball tickets for a game near the end of the season and the game is shaping up to have major playoff implications, the value of your tickets may go up. Similarly, if your team is in the gutter and unlikely to make the playoffs, the value may plummet. Performers adding additional shows and major news events can also affect ticketing markets.
